

- ITIN TIMELINES

What every CPA should know about ITIN timelines.

A practical guide for CPAs and EAs on IRS processing, expiration, and renewal — so you can keep clients compliant and ahead of avoidable delays.

● PROCESSING TIMES

IRS processing times vary by case.

ITIN processing depends on the season, application volume, and document completeness. Filing during peak periods or with incomplete paperwork is a common reason timelines stretch out for clients.

● CHECKING STATUS

Know how to check a client's status.

When a client's ITIN is delayed, you can help them follow up with the IRS. Have the right details ready before you inquire about an application's status.

- ◆ The date Form W-7 was filed
- ◆ The client's mailing information
- ◆ Copies of submitted documents

● EXPIRATION RULES

Know what triggers ITIN expiration.

An ITIN generally expires after three consecutive years without being used on a federal tax return. Certain older ITINs also expire on set schedules — worth flagging for clients early.

● RENEWAL STRATEGY

Help clients renew before they're stuck.

Proactive renewal keeps clients from scrambling at filing time. Identify expiring ITINs early, gather the required documentation, and submit renewals ahead of the return that depends on them.

- THE CAA ROLE

How a CAA streamlines renewals.

A Certified Acceptance Agent can verify client documents, complete the certification, and coordinate with the IRS — reducing back-and-forth and helping renewals move through cleanly, where the program applies.

• CLIENT COMPLIANCE

Keep every client compliant and on track.

Track ITIN status across your client book, watch for upcoming expirations, and file complete applications the first time. A few simple habits prevent most compliance headaches and delays.
